After Chloe and Derek spend the weekend at the Whitemore's, tragedy strikes at its worst ever. She had no idea Jesse would go after the people she loved. But Jesse is a coward, a true psychopath, and strikes when no one is looking. He'll take out any obstacle to get to her. Chloe is well aware she's in for the fight of her life and she's willing to risk it at all costs if that is what it takes to protect her newfound family.

She finally meets Jake Stark, Derek's older brother. At first, he is suspicious of her, but once he gets a chance to learn about her past, he takes her under his wing. He is proud to call her family and will protect her at all costs. Their bond grows strong while Chloe continues to train with Max. She knows Jesse is watching her every move and that is how she wants it. She is the bait... She wants him to pay with his life!

But can she be free from the fear of running and hiding?

Chloe will finally understand that pain does go away, that she will heal—that the scars are not a reminder of her horrid past as a child or a young woman but a reminder of her strength to stand up and her will to live. Her scars signify strength and she will wear them proudly because now the pain will be gone.
