Matching Wits is a collection of poetry that spans and skips generations of the Keene family. F. Willis Keene (1834-1911) penned poems about nature, love, family and life, including campaign songs for his friend Stephen Douglas who ran for president against Abraham Lincoln in 1860. Nearly 150 years later, F. Willis' great grandson, Todd Keene, a writer himself, discovered his poems, and was astonished at the similarities in their writings and subject matter. This compilation takes readers on a journey from past to present and back again, revealing just how much things have changed ... and yet, haven't when it comes to matter of the heart and the shared human experience.
