

Hathcock Burke Elephant Valley Hamburger Hunt: The Best Snipers

Sniper teams are often associated with military operations, where their precision and lethality can be the difference between success and failure. However, there are also civilian sniper competitions that showcase the skills of these sharpshooters in a more controlled environment. One such event is the Hathcock Burke Elephant Valley Hamburger Hunt, where the world's best snipers gather to test their mettle.

The Hathcock Burke Elephant Valley Hamburger Hunt takes place annually in a sprawling wildlife reserve, where participants navigate through rugged terrain to locate and eliminate life-size hamburger targets strategically placed throughout the area. This challenging competition not only assesses the accuracy of the snipers but also evaluates their ability to adapt to varying landscapes and shooting scenarios.

With an emphasis on long-range shooting, the event attracts elite snipers from across the globe who compete for the prestigious title of being the best sniper. One of the key features that separates this competition from others is the inclusion of elephant-shaped targets, making it a unique and thrilling experience for both participants and spectators alike.

This short-story based on a true event in 1967 Vietnam tells how legendary U.S. Marine snipers Gunnery Sergeant Carlos Hathcock and his buddy Lance Corporal Johnnie Burke set off on a mission into enemy occupied Elephant Valley to stir up their brand of trouble. What they are surprised to find there is a confrontation with an entire company of North Vietnamese Army regulars. Exactly how these two snipers manage to control the situation is one of the most exciting improbabilities of the entire war.

Moreover, these two Marines pull this stunt off continually without a break for days and nights and set a precedent in the annals of Marine battles. Two men against a company of enemy soldiers and how these two came out smelling like roses (well not quite) is one of the most intriguing tales ever told. You the reader are there with them and you learn how they did it.

Sadly, not long after this triumph, Hathcock's buddy John R. Burke loses his life during a nighttime firefight in which Marine base Hill 950 is over-run by a superior force of the NVA. But not before Burke displays such heroism during the battle that his selfless actions earn him the Navy Cross, the Bronze Star and other commendations the Marines posthumously award its heroes. This too is part of this short but fast-moving story.

This exciting true adventure tale will give you these answers and more... just hang in there with Carlos Hathcock and this author will tell you how he did it. Here are Hathcock's tips for sighting in a sportsman's rifle, as only he knew how to do it to make those incredible long-range shots.
