‘A master of seagoing adventure.’ Clive Cussler

A mission to complete. A war to avert. A nation to save ...

It is spring in west Africa.

Richard Mariner of the Heritage-Mariner Shipping Company has delivered the great iceberg, codenamed Manhattan, to the drought-stricken country of Mau.

Now, with his associates in the United Nations, he stands ready to release the life-giving water it represents to the parched heartlands.

But disaster is always close at hand and the political situation threatens to ruin everything when a military coup sparks a bloody tribal war.

The diplomatic situation also becomes critical as war hungry neighbours, illicitly armed with the most advanced weapons, are tempted into the fray.

There are those who suspect that the gigantic ice-island has been contaminated with the top-secret results of a desperate gamble to avert total meltdown at Chernobyl.

Suspicion soon turns apparent friends into secret enemies who cannot let Mariner succeed, no matter what terrible price his failure might cost...

As the torrid heat of a tropical summer begins to build, Richard Mariner must carry out an epic experiment; one which will prevent Manhattan from melting, and thereby avert a massive social, moral and financial disaster.

But he only has sixty-six days in which to do it and time is quickly running out...
