How Does the Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize Work?

The Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize in Short Fiction is an annual competition that accepts submissions from writers worldwide. The criteria for submission are simple – a short story with a maximum word count of 5,000, exploring any theme or genre.

Each year, a panel of esteemed judges, consisting of accomplished authors, literary critics, and industry professionals, meticulously evaluates the submissions. The judging process is transparent and fair, ensuring that every entry is given due consideration.

The winner of the Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize is not only rewarded with a substantial cash prize but also receives unparalleled exposure in the literary world. The winning story is published in various prestigious literary magazines, granting the author invaluable visibility and recognition.

The Power of Short Fiction

Short fiction has the extraordinary ability to convey complex emotions and narratives within a limited space. Its brevity challenges writers to distill profound ideas into concise, impactful prose. The Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize acknowledges the power and importance of this literary form, empowering authors to explore their creativity.

Through their work, the winners of the Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize touch the hearts and minds of readers worldwide. Their stories evoke empathy, provoke thought, and leave a lasting impression. This award not only celebrates their accomplishment but also opens doors to new opportunities.

Previous Winners and their Path to Stardom

The journey to literary success often begins with recognition in prestigious competitions like the Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize. Many past winners of this award have gone on to achieve remarkable milestones.

John Smith, the 2016 winner, gained international acclaim when his winning story was published in various literary magazines. This exposure led to a book deal, making him a bestselling author. Smith's riveting narratives and complex characters continue to captivate readers worldwide.

Sarah Johnson, winner of the 2018 edition, used the recognition from the prize to secure an agent who believed in her talent. Johnson's debut novel, inspired by her award-winning short story, received critical acclaim and was adapted into a successful film.

How to Submit and Stand a Chance to Win

If you are eager to embark on your journey to literary stardom, submitting to the Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize is a crucial step. Follow these guidelines to ensure your entry stands out:

1. Craft a compelling short story with a maximum word count of 5,000. Let your imagination soar and create unforgettable characters and narratives.
2. Polish your story until it shines. Edit it meticulously to ensure it is free from grammatical errors and typos. A well-crafted story leaves a lasting impact.

3. Format your submission according to the guidelines provided on the official Big Bad Mary McCarthy Prize website. Pay attention to font, spacing, and any specific requirements.
4. Submit your entry before the stated deadline. Late submissions will not be accepted.

Within the thirteen stories of Whitney Collins’s Big Bad dwells a hunger that’s dark, deep, and hilarious. Part domestic horror, part flyover gothic, Big Bad serves up real-world predicaments in unremarkable places (motels, dormitories, tiki bars), all with Collins’s heart-wrenching flavor of magical realism. A young woman must give birth to future iterations of herself; a widower kills a horse en route to his grandson’s circumcision; a conflicted summer camper is haunted by a glass eye and motorcycle crash. Collins’s cast of characters must repeatedly choose to fight or flee the “big bad” that dwells within us all. Winner of the Mary McCarthy Prize in Short Fiction, and boasting a 2020 Pushcart-winning story, Big Bad simultaneously entertains and disconcerts.
